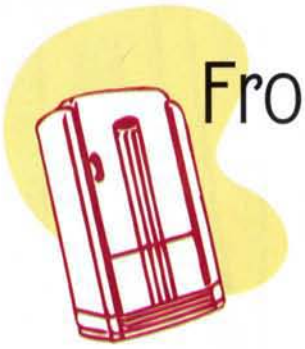
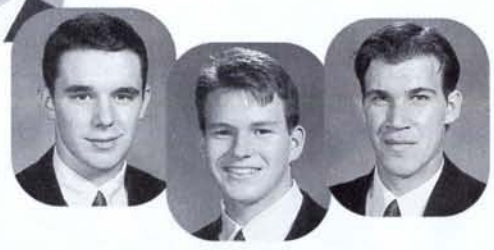
BJU REVIEW

Fall 1996

From the Refrigerator Door



'86 grad Bill Reagan, news photographer for WBNS 10 TV in Columbus, OH, received two Midwestern Regional Emmy awards for public service programming and for best editor. Both awards were given for "Inside the Fire," a 30-minute news special on how to survive a house fire.



Competing against four other college groups, a BJU trombone quartet comprised of senior Jeremy Kolwinska, sophomores Bryan McNally and Joey Nelson, and freshman Wes Lebo won the brass ensemble competition at the Brass Symposium sponsored by North Greenville College in South Carolina.

Jonathan Moyer, junior piano performance major, placed second in the annual competition of the Columbia Philharmonic Concerto competition of the Columbia (SC) Philharmonic Orchestra on May 4 with a cash award of $500.

Darren Lawson, '86 grad and Associate Dean of the School of Fine Arts, was chosen out of 1,500 teachers to receive a teaching award from the University of Kansas. He was honored by the Chancellor and Vice Chancellor at a special awards ceremony in May and was invited to be a member of the platform party at graduation ceremonies.

Brad Wilson, '91 grad and a graduate voice performance student, won first place in the regional graduate men's division voice competition of the National Association of Teachers of Singing held in Maryland. He also placed second in the music theater division.

Correction: In the Summer issue, the runners up of the women's volleyball championship should have been Beta Epsilon Chi, not Beta Chi Omega.

Is There Life After Homework?

May 1-3 Prologue

In place of the traditional Shakespearean fare, the BJU Classic Players performed Prologue, a verse drama telling the story of the 15th century Czech reformer Jon Hus. Written by Dr. Bob Jones, Jr., the play was directed by Mrs. Jones III, and Dr. Jones III played Hus.

May 4 Graduation

After 4 years of sweat, blood, and tears, not to mention sleep deprivation and pizza binges, 582 seniors finally received their long-awaited bachelor's degrees. 105 received master's degrees, 33 received one- or two-year trade certificates and 55 received associate degrees. Since 1927, BJU has graduated over 31,000 students. That's a lot of pizza!

June 3-7 H.E.L.P. Conference

Hundreds of home educators and their families visited the campus for a week of concentrated training in home schooling. The conference included an afternoon Frolic and a huge product fair with dozens of demonstrations, teaching aids, books, and videos to peruse and purchase.

'68 grad Dr. Brodie Bricker, coordinator of administrative leadership for the School District of Greenville County, was selected Educational Administrator of the Year by the South Carolina Association of Educational Office Professionals.

The University vesper choir, directed by Dr. David Parker, gave a candlelight concert in the Bruton Parish Church of Colonial Williamsburg as part of the regular candlelight concert season. They were accompanied by organist Dr. Ed Dunbar.

Jim Brooks, BJU art faculty member and '58 grad, has been invited to participate in The Friends of the National Zoo Wildlife Exposition in Washington, D.C., this September. His artwork will be exhibited along with work from selected artists from across the country.

Violin maker John Sipe has created a new violin named in honor of Dr. Bob Jones Sr. as part of a set of violins named for historical figures. Mr. Sipe recently donated a quartet of string instruments to BJU and commissioned Dr. Dwight Gustafson to write the string quartet "Songs of the Kings" for another set of instruments. This special violin is available for purchase.

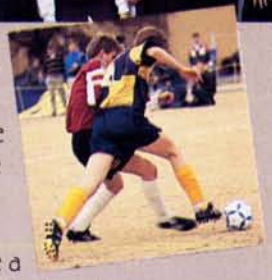
About the Cover

This is a year of reminiscing for BJU. 1997 marks our 70th year anniversary and 50 years in Greenville. So we've dug out some of those priceless old pictures and compared them to how things look today. (See page 8 for more great shots).

Visit at Thanksgiving

The cover shows members of the BJU Classic Players performing Shakespeare's The Tempest in 1989 and 1950. They will be performing it again this Nov. 27–30 in the Rodeheaver Auditorium. Come join us for Thanksgiving and see the play!



Also, join us for a Praise service and have Thanksgiving dinner with us in the Dining Common. Then head out to the stadium for the annual Turkey Bowl where the top two BJU soccer teams will battle it out for the championship. On Friday, take a tour, see the Art Gallery and visit a few classes. Thanksgiving is an exciting time to visit BJU! For a free brochure, mark the appropriate box and send in the response coupon on the inside back cover, or call (864)242-5100, ext. 3120.

June10
Summer Camps

June 10 marked the beginning of BJU summer camps. Teens from around the U.S. came for a focused, week-long session in one of these eleven areas: Criminal Justice, Volleyball, Basketball, Soccer, Music, Speech and Drama, Debate, Art, Science, Nursing, and Journalism. Send in the response coupon for a free brochure about next year's camps. (The brochure will be available in November.)

June11
Demolition Time

A long-standing section of apartments known as Faculty Court was plowed under to make room for more parking space. Faculty and staff who had raised their families there collected yellow bricks from the rubble as souvenirs.

June29-July6
Peace-full Vacation

Dozens of visitors chose BJU's beautiful campus to retreat to this year during the annual Peace-full Vacation. They attended seminars, played games, learned new skills and met new friends. Sound like fun? Send in the response coupon to find out about next summer.

June29-July22
As You Like It

A condensed and light-hearted version of Shakespeare's comedy was presented by several faculty, staff and students still here for the summer. The set was balloon-embellished and the six performances were held in the intimate setting of Performance Hall.

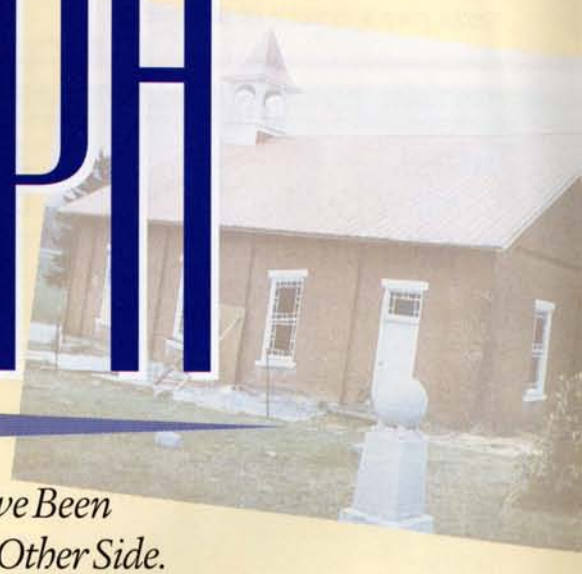
Tears, Trials, & TRIUMPH



3 Comeback Stories from Grads Who've Been Through the Valley and Come Out the Other Side.

Rising from the rubble

Flatwoods, Pennsylvania, is a place "you wouldn't go by on the way to anywhere," says Pastor Mel Wingrove, '65 BJ grad. And if you had visited his church, Flatwoods Baptist, before 1983, and asked where the restrooms were, he would have guided you out by a crowded cemetery to a two-seater outhouse. "The church was built in 1860 and had 1860 plumbing to go with it," he says smiling.

This minor inconvenience caused major embarrassment to the congregation when visitors arrived. "Whenever people visited and asked where the restroom was, we would never see them again." He and his wife Jan ('66 BJ grad) moved to Pennsylvania from Ontario, Canada, in 1980. In 1981, the church decided to update the building by digging out a basement in order to add facilities and new Sunday school rooms. But what seemed like a simple solution soon became a seven-year headache.

In the summer of '81 the church began digging out their new basement. By the spring of '83, they had reinforced three walls and were getting ready to work on the fourth when a week-long thunderstorm hit, saturating the ground, causing the wall to fall in and the roof to sag. The disaster was unbearable. The volunteers had been doing everything by hand in order to save money. Using pick axes and shovels, they had been digging and carrying away excavated dirt for over a year. Now, not only was their basement gone, but their church was destroyed as well.

Pastor Wingrove went out to the site that day to look at the damage. "The first thing I told the Lord when I saw the church was, 'Why, after we put so much work into this, is it now gone?' But the Lord gave me a passage of Scripture from I Kings 12:24 that said, 'This thing is from Me.' So I said O.K." The next thing he had to do was convince the church members.

At this point the congregation was discouraged and divided. They rented temporary facilities and talked about what to do next. Some wanted to rebuild the old building; others wanted to start new. "We talked to 15 contractors and found out that it would cost about $150,000 to rebuild the one wall, so we figured we could build a new building for that." However, with a congregation of about 80 regular members, raising the money seemed impossible, not to mention the fact that they had to find new property since they were not allowed to put a septic tank in the cemetery. Also, Pastor Wingrove had strong convictions about borrowing money.

"I never saw it in the Scriptures where people borrowed money to build," he says. "I had told the people that we were not going to borrow or sell bonds, but rather, when we had the money, we would build, and when we ran out of money, we would stop."

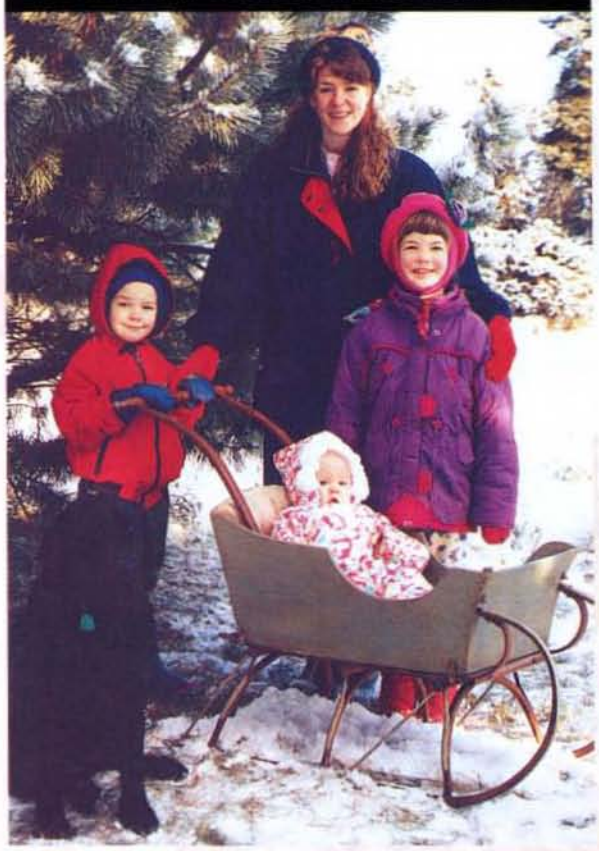
So they began praying for money, waiting to see what God would do. "The Lord sent more than we needed," he says. "Some came from the community, some from the congregation, and some from people we didn't even know. A lady none of us knew left the church $76,000 in her will, and others in Florida sent $40-50,000."

Even the property was a gift from God. "I went up and down the country roads visiting everybody I knew with property to see if they would sell, but nobody would. One day some folks called up and said they'd like to meet with the trustees. They said the Lord had told them to give us some property, so they sold it to us for a dollar an acre." The new church sits on 2¾ acres in the corner of a cornfield, not even a mile from the site of the old building.

In the fall of '88, Dr. Ed Panosian of the BJ faculty participated in the dedication for the new building, all built by volunteer work and held together by prayer. "One thing I've learned," says Wingrove, "is that when God wants to do something, if you're willing to work, He'll do what you can't do."

So if you do ever find yourself in Flatwoods, stop by and visit the church folks there call a miracle. The congregation is friendly and helpful and not at all afraid to show you where the restrooms are.

All in God's own time



When Vicky Blough Daniels ('85 grad) watched her husband Kevin ('84 grad) leave for an overnight trip on horseback in Wyoming, she had no idea how drastically her life would change in the days that followed.

That afternoon Kevin had dismounted his horse in order to help one of the men adjust the load on a pack horse that was acting up. The horse, not appreciating the weight shift on his back, bolted and jumped over some high sage brush. Kevin held on to the lead rope, tripped over the brush and fell. The back hoof of the horse came up and struck the left side of his face causing a severe stroke that damaged the left side of his brain. Kevin never spoke again. He went into a coma and died in a Salt Lake City hospital three days later.

His was a tragedy no one could understand. He and Vicky had dedicated their lives to serving the Lord through an organization called Tradesmen for Christ, a ministry of a local church. They travelled around to churches, missionaries, and camp ministries to help with building projects. Many times Kevin did the finish work on churches that the BJU Trade Team had built.

They had just taken a big step, selling their house and buying a trailer that would serve as their mobile house. They had three children, Abigail, Caleb, and baby Joanna, who had been born just ten weeks before. Everything seemed to be working out great. So why did God take Kevin?

Vicky doesn't hesitate to answer. "There are no accidents with God. Could the God who is all powerful and perfect hold back the force of the horse's kick? Of course! But that was not in His plan. Kevin was not mine to keep. Besides, if Kevin would have survived, he would not have had the ability to use his entire right side of his body, would not have had any speech skills, and would have had a severely changed personality."

After the funeral, Vicky and her children moved to Alaska and into her parents' roomy house. She is thankful for having family and security to help her through this difficult time, yet Kevin's absence has left a sadness that will take time to heal. "Every day I grieve about something. It's usually at night when I have my little cry. I miss the ministry. I miss being with my husband who was my very best friend."

But through it all, she has grown closer to God, and better understands His promise to never leave her or forsake her. "For example, the first trip on the plane back was kind of bumpy, and usually I would hold on to Kevin's strong arm. But I remember feeling an incredible peace, like the Lord's arms were just wrapped around me. It's just incredible how God protected me from having fears, because all I could think about was how God was going to take care of me."

Not only did God take care of her, but He also took care of at least seven other people who received Kevin's organs after his death. In death, Kevin was able to give a 40-year-old father of several children a heart he'd been waiting for for over a year, a 58-year-old father of five a new liver, a 20-year-old college student a kidney, a 42-year-old father of four a kidney, a 55-year-old woman and a 60-year-old man a lung each, and two women can now see, thanks to his donated corneas. Vicky has written to them and hopes to share salvation with them. God also used money given in Kevin's memory to help build a pavilion at Red Cliff Bible Camp in Wyoming, replacing a leaky tent that Kevin once spoke under. Kevin had planned to help build this pavilion.

Now, over a year later, the pavilion is under construction; her children are a year older; she's sold the trailer, and life goes on. Vicky home schools her children and encourages other widows who are going through her same struggles. Still, Kevin is never far from her mind. "I'm so thankful that Kevin was a child of God. The kids and I love to think about how happy he is in heaven. We look forward to the day we will join him in a place where there are no tears, no sorrow, no pain, no sickness, and no death."

Finding strength in weakness

Kay Newman used to think she had "the meanest mother in the world." Kay was born with spastic cerebral palsy, giving her difficulties with speaking, hearing, walking, and coordination. She had three brothers and two sisters who had no disabilities, and she often felt sorry for herself watching them play. But her parents refused to pity her.

"One time I fell down on the floor and I wanted Mom to come running and say 'Oh, you poor child,' but she didn't. Instead she said, 'Kay, did you make a hole in the floor?' I was so angry at her! I thought at that time that she didn't love me. But later I realized that it was because she loved me that she didn't come running. She wanted me to figure out a way to get up by myself."

Struggling to be self-sufficient, it wasn't until she was 22 years old that Kay learned to lean on the Lord for strength. "Before I knew the Lord personally," she says, "I had a lot of bitterness in my life because I was different and could not be like other people. But when the Lord changed me, He gave me a new desire. I didn't want to be like anybody else anymore. I just wanted to be me."

At that time she was in a vocational program where her job was to put pricing stickers on items. This discouraged her. "I didn't think I was better than anyone else, but I thought I had more potential," she says. She had gotten only as far as 8th grade in her education because of the many surgeries she required, so she decided to first of all finish high school and then go to college. After high school, she chose a secular college and began to feel herself slipping farther away from God. Depressed, she had made up her mind to quit when a coordinator at college suggested she look into BJU. She agreed to give it a try.

"After I visited BJU, I said, 'Lord, this is where I want to be!'" So she enrolled in the Bob Jones University Institute of Christian Service (now called the School of Applied Studies). At first, just getting around was the biggest obstacle for Kay. She had to leave for class 15 minutes early in order to walk to class on time. Every three months or so she had to go to the infirmary just to recuperate from exhaustion. Eventually, the University provided her with a cart and driver. People still talk about "Sunshine" and her cart. She was nicknamed "Sunshine" for her sunny disposition, and because she always had a way of brightening a person's day.

"Whenever I got discouraged at school, I would remember three things: one, the Lord put me there; two, I had people praying for me; and three, I had my cart. With those three things, I was able to accomplish what the Lord wanted me to accomplish," she says. And she did. In 1981 at the age of 32 she received her degree, making her the only one in her family to ever finish college.

She majored in Christian Service with the goal of working in a ministry for the handicapped. She worked at the Shriners Hospital for Crippled Children and with BJU faculty member Chuck Luttrell on extension ministries to mentally and physically disabled children.

Immediately after graduation, Kay was hired by Hidden Treasure, a SC Christian school for the handicapped, and has worked there 15 years. Kay assists the teachers and has worked with five-year-olds on up to young ladies. With 59 students enrolled, Kay explains that "it's not one school; it's like having 59 schools in one because everyone is at different levels and in different grades.

"Working with the students has made me so thankful for what I have," Kay says. "Some don't have the use of their hands, or can't communicate. It's only by the Lord's grace that I can communicate, I can use my hands, I can hear, I can walk—I have everything I need. I do accept my limitations, because that's the way the Lord designed me. I've also been able to encourage some of the students and staff. I've been through the same struggles they're going through. I know the Lord can help me, so they know the Lord can help them."

Kay is now in the final stages of completing a special tract called "From Bitterness to Joy," a summary of her life's testimony that she hopes will witness to lost people and encourage Christians. "I know when I get to glory I'll have a new body, and that keeps me going. But until then, I have learned to really depend on God. I thank Him that I'm handicapped, because it makes me depend on Him all the time, every day, for everything."

50, 70, 2000

1997 MARKS A DUAL anniversary for Bob Jones University: 50 years in Greenville, SC, and 70 years in existence. We're celebrating all year with a grateful look into our past and a hopeful look into our future, recounting all the blessings along the way.

In 1927, with the Great Depression looming around the corner, Bob Jones Sr., was witnessing a dream come true. In September of that year, the campus at College Point, FL, opened its doors to 88 students, laying the foundation for what has become Bob Jones University. Burdened for America's youth, Dr. Jones wanted "to build a school that will have high cultural and academic standards and…a school that will keep in use an old-time, country mourner's bench where folks can get right with God."

Now, 70 years later, Bob Jones University stands as a testimony to that dream. BJU has grown to over 5,000 students and has expanded and outgrown two college campuses

(Florida and Tennessee) and is stretching the seams of a third. The Art Gallery has become internationally recognized as one of the greatest collections of religious art, just as BJU graduates have come to be known around the world for their values, culture, and spiritual zeal.

When BJU settled in South Carolina 50 years ago, Senator Strom Thurmond said the best thing he ever did as governor was to get BJU to come to Greenville. Since then, Greenville has always had a special place in the hearts of BJU faculty and alumni.

That's why this year we want to give God the glory for keeping the University on track and growing for 70 years and also let Greenville know how grateful we are to them for having us as neighbors for a half-century. The highlight of the anniversary will be the '97 Bible Conference, when we have the goal of 2,000 alumni returning to campus for an enormous celebration. DON'T MISS IT!

BJU CELEBRATES in a BIG WAY!

2,000 ALUMNI to reunite at 1997 BIBLE CONFERENCE

TO CELEBRATE our anniversary, we're inviting all alumni back for a huge reunion. Call up all the OLD ROOMMATES, FRIENDS and TEACHERS you haven't seen in years and plan to meet here for an exciting BIBLE CONFERENCE. Special activities will include an alumni choir, former ministry teams performing special music numbers, speakers from each decade of BJU's history, an intercollegiate soccer game, and much more. Make plans to come because the next reunion may not happen until the 100th anniversary (at which point you'll be 30 years older). Can you afford to wait that long? Be a part of history. Be part of the greatest homecoming ever!

I Remember:

MARTHA JANE GILLOGLY,
Class of 1958
Heath, Ohio
Retired roofing and sheet metal firm employee

"Society and the people I met meant the most to me while I was at college. I remember the jokes my roommates and I used to play on each other, like the time I came back from the shower to find my bed covered with cracker crumbs or whatever they could find. That was back when the dorms weren't carpeted and there were only two phones to a hall. I remember Dr. Bob Sr. He had a very strong personality. He wasn't one to give in to the pressures of the day. I really admired him for that."

CLYDE ROBERT BAKER,
Class of 1956
Retired sales associate and
PHYLLIS NICHOLS BAKER,
Class of 1950
Retired high school guidance counselor
Chattanooga, TN

(PHYLLIS) "I came to BJ as a sophomore in high school back on the Cleveland campus in 1943. I can remember the day the committee from Greenville came to Cleveland and announced their invitation up on the platform. When I came to the Greenville campus, we had to walk on planks until they poured the sidewalks. Since I started so young, at 14 years of age, Dr. Bob Sr. was a fatherly figure to me. He would always talk to the girls before Christmas vacation about keeping up our standards."

(CLYDE) "I came to BJU after the Korean war. My wife and I had our first baby on campus in the hospital which used to be where the Academy is now. My memories of college are pushing a baby buggy around everywhere I went, and that was back before there were covers over the sidewalks."

CHECK your mailbox for a $3,000 KEY!

AS PART OF THE ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATION, BJU will be mailing out special keys to all ALUMNI ASSOCIATION MEMBERS about a month before the 1997 BIBLE CONFERENCE. Fifty of these keys are worth up to $3,000 each! Bring your key to BIBLE CONFERENCE and try it in the Door of Opportunity. The first 10 alumni whose keys open this door will receive a $3,000 opportunity certificate that they can give to a child of their choice toward his tuition at BJU, or they may put it into the BJU FINANCIAL AID FUND FOR ALUMNI CHILDREN. The next 40 alumni whose keys open this door will receive a $1,000 opportunity certificate. Any unclaimed money will go into the financial aid fund for alumni children.

(ONLY ALUMNI ASSOCIATION MEMBERS will receive keys--so if you need to renew, call soon!)

The PRESIDENT'S Corner

Do you think college costs are too high?

We do.

The COLLEGIATE INFORMATION SERVICES, a Greenwich, CT, firm that advises colleges, surveyed 502 guidance counselors in 1995 and found that 85 percent say college has become too expensive. This was reported in USA Today, May 29, 1996.

At the present time, BOB JONES UNIVERSITY'S annual room, board, and tuition costs are only $8880. That's less than half the national average for private colleges. Throughout its history, the University has kept its prices at rock bottom out of concern for the strain upon CHRISTIAN FAMILIES' BUDGETS. Many of you have paid for your children to be in Christian schools since kindergarten and have been unable to save anything for a Christian college. We are on your side. The faculty, staff, and administration of BJU have sacrificed throughout these 69 years of history because we know many of you have sacrificed.

While we should be charging $12,000-$14,000 to pay the staff here the average wage most of our students' parents are making, we know that you couldn't pay that. Graduates and their parents express great affection for the University because they know they have been given the best value available in Christian higher education.

As the University begins its 70th year of history, we pledge to you by the Lord's grace to continue giving generations yet to come the best value. BJU really is "THE CHRISTIAN FAMILY'S GOOD FRIEND." ■

Dating:

PART TWO

Last issue we brought you "Dating: Part One," an inside look at meeting, making friends, and dating on campus. This article takes you past the puppy love stage to the serious mush—engagement and marriage. Bear with these Romeos and Juliets as they share with you one of the most romantic moments of their lives—the day they got engaged.

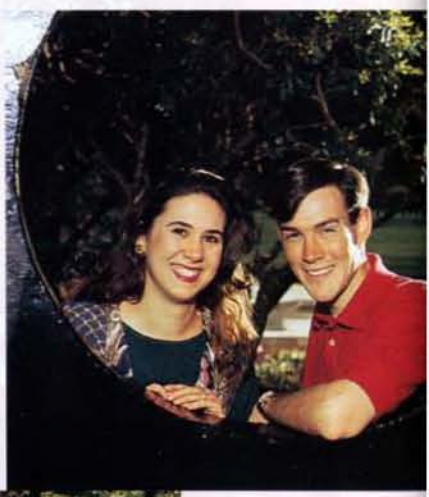
How do I love thee? Let me count the karats . . .

Jeremy Watkins, Atlanta, GA
Charise Gendreau, Greenville, SC
Wedding date: October 19, 1996

"Over Christmas break, Charise came to my home. I told her we were going to see the play 'A Christmas Carol' downtown. When we got to the city, I handed her a note and told her to follow the directions, and then I left her standing by herself. The directions led her to a friend of mine who had a gift and another note. I had five friends and two younger brothers take her all over the city. I had dinner in a private dining room at the Ritz Carlton for her at the last point where I asked her to marry me. After dinner all our friends came in for a big celebration party!"

Laura Greene Boehm, Charleston, SC
Jason Boehm, Florence, AL
Wedding date: June 29, 1996

"I had planned a surprise candlelight dinner with china, crystal, music, and good food at a friend's house on Paris Mountain. Upstairs in their house is a little loft that has windows that look out over Greenville. Little did I know Jason knew all that was being planned. He brought a large, beautiful arrangement of roses. After we ate, we began to read each note he had attached to each rose. Each note was a special memory that we'd shared. When we got to the 12th rose, it said 'the loft.' He said 'Let's play the game he loves me, he loves me not.' So I pulled the petals off and got nervous when I saw something sparkle in the middle. Inside was a ring! He asked me to marry him, and I said, 'Yes!'"



Lydia Daulton Jorgensen, Fitchburg, MA
Brennen Jorgensen, Seattle, WA
Wedding date: July 27, 1996

"We took a ferry from Seattle over to Whidbey Island and were walking along the beach. We got tired and sat down on a piece of driftwood. When we got up to walk again, he called my attention to a beautiful seashell and asked me how it got there. Immediately I knew! He had me open it and there was a beautiful diamond ring inside. Then he got down on his knee and asked me to marry him."

Dan Moore, Ypsilanti, MI
Michelle Durrill, Huntsville, Alabama
Wedding date: January 4, 1997

"After dinner, we went for a walk. Her brother sneaked out ahead of us and dropped off the bag which had the ring in it. When we walked by the bag, she didn't even see it. I had to say 'What's this?' Then she opened it. She collects carousel horses, so I got her a figurine of one and put the ring on the center post. I told her I loved her and wanted her to marry me. She said 'Yes!'"

Angelika Jaeger, Croton, OH
John McClelland, Indiana, PA
Wedding date: June 21, 1997

"Up the side of Mt. Washington, one of the oldest inclines travels up and down to take tourists to an overlook in Pittsburgh. I had never been, so we took it up to a breathtaking view of the city. The sun had just set, and it was snowing lightly. He gave me a present and said it was a memento of a Christmas we'd spent together before. Inside the package was a Nutcracker figurine and tied to its arm with a ribbon was a diamond ring. I was so surprised!"

Shannon Simpson, Cross Hill, SC
David Milligan, Tampa, FL
Wedding date: Undetermined

"I went to visit David in Tampa during Christmas break. He had a friend take us flying over the city in his small plane. The city lights at night were beautiful! We landed near where his mom worked and borrowed her red convertible to drive to St. Petersburg where we ate supper and then went for a walk on the beach. While we were listening to the sound of the waves, he remarked that only one more thing could make it perfect. He got down on his knees and asked me to marry him. I screamed 'YES!'"

DeAnna Kester, Taylors, SC
Kenny Theaker, Boyne, MI
Wedding date: August 31, 1996

"We went to the Trillium in Michigan, a restaurant on the top floor of the Grand Traverse Hotel, where we had a great view of Lake Michigan and saw a beautiful sunset. Then we went to the lake front where he had a blanket, a picnic basket, and two of my favorite colored roses lying on the beach with some romantic music playing. We ate dessert, and he took me up this hill where there was a swing that overlooked the lake. There I found a box with my name on it that had a treasure map inside. The map gave me clues to where I could find four presents. By now I was getting suspicious. I had so much fun trying to figure out his clues! The last clue led to a buried treasure chest and inside was a very sweet note telling me how much he loved me, a piece of my favorite chocolate, and a rose with my beautiful diamond attached!"

How to handle Long-distance Relationship Syndrome

The downside to meeting at college is that usually you and your beloved are from different states. Which means come summer, he goes home to Idaho and she to Vermont for three agonizing months apart. How do you handle separation? If you've had to take on a second job just to pay your phone bill, you probably need professional help. Read how these heart-sick folks have learned to cope with LRS (Long-distance Relationship Syndrome).

"I left on a ten-week ministry team the day after we were engaged. To my surprise, a letter from Jim was waiting for me at every church I visited that summer (about 70). His sacrifice in writing these letters spoke volumes about his devotion to me."—Mrs. Pat Berg, faculty

"Before you can be in a long-distance relationship, you must have a good foundation of trust and security in the other person. Communication is the key."—Christy Healan, student

"Shortly after we were married, Larry went off to the Vietnam War for a year. I had a 3-month-old baby, and every morning I'd show baby Michael his daddy's picture. We'd pray for him and I'd talk about him so Michael knew his daddy when he came home. It really helped me to keep busy and talk with others whose husbands were away too."
—Mrs. Dawn Kester, staff

"Be creative. Send small packages filled with things that will bring back memories of times spent together. No matter what, keep the communication open and remember all the good times, assuring each other there will be more."—Laura Greene, student

"Sometimes you can get to the point that you wonder if your boyfriend is someone you really met, or just a figment of your imagination. It's tough! Both people have to work very hard to keep the communication strong."—Joy Cusson, student

"A long-distance relationship is far from easy, but if it's true love and God is the foundation of the relationship, nothing can sever the tie. It really teaches us to trust in God. We talk on the phone a lot, and we pray together."—Kelly Schumacher, student

"Whenever our jobs take us out of town, we write and phone each other. Although we never like to be apart, we look at these times as opportunities for each of us to grow and never as a threat to our relationship. When we have to be apart, we just look forward to when we can be back together."
—Mr. Alan Lohr, staff

"Write lots of letters. It's especially hard for the guys, but a letter carries much more meaning than a quick dial on the phone. Plus, you know how girls love to save things!"—Dan Moore, student
